

WALL STREET IS NOW THREATENED WITH A STRIKE

Telegraphers Declare Brokers Are Sending Out Messages To Help Companies.

SMALL EXPECTS PEACE

Says Roosevelt Is to Take Hand in Fight to Force Arbitration.

Unless the end of the strike of the telegraphers is in sight within a day or two, it is probable the union will call out the operators employed in Wall street. This call is expected to be issued on Wednesday.

There are nearly one thousand telegraphers in the Wall street district, all of whom received the increased wages demanded when men employed by the Western Union and the Postal companies went on strike. They have been told, however, not allowed to send commercial messages over the leased wires, which, under ordinary conditions, would have been handled by the regular offices.

At a meeting of the strikers yesterday in Clinton Hall it was said that there was a movement on the part of the brokers to get rid of union operators, and that the ordering out of the men regardless of contracts was not only the quickest way to bring the brokers to terms, but would also have such a depressing effect on business interests that the Western Union and Postal companies would be compelled to agree to arbitration.

Sylvester J. Small, president of the Telegraphers' Union, has given out a statement in Chicago, in which he said President Roosevelt had decided to take a hand in the fight, and that the companies would be ready to arbitrate within the next few days.

Why Should Not Poor Man Be Encouraged to Do the Housework?

Woman Is Crowding Him Out of His Own Fields, and Now Pittsburg Punishes Him for Butting Into Hers.

By Nixola Greeley-Smith.

AT the instance of the Servant Girls' Union of Pittsburg a man was arrested last week for no better reason than that he was doing housework for hire and so keeping some girl out of a job.

A magistrate sent him to the workhouse for ninety days, telling him he would be taught there to do other things besides housework.

This is all wrong.

Not only is it unjust to man, but it is very unwise of woman, for in the increasing willingness of an occasional man to sweep and cook and dust and sew, and the talent he displays for these tasks, may be the solution of the vexing servant-girl question.

Of course, to solve the servant girl problem would absolutely destroy its value as a topic of feminine conversation and make mute—at least temporarily—many lovely voices.

What Is There Left for Poor Man to Do?

But since woman is willing and anxious and able, as she demonstrates day after day, to do man's work, what is there left for the poor deposed Lord of Creation to do but take up the dropped stitches of woman's work and be cook, housemaid or laundress, as the demand requires and his inclinations prompt?

Is there anything more incongruous, more devoid of venerable tradition in an "upstart" man than in a woman civil engineer? The twentieth century has given us both, and if we are properly in tune with the spirit of our times we should be thankful for each of them.

The favorite argument to prove woman's inferiority of those women who make a living by devoting the capacities of their own sex, is that man is endowed with keener senses of taste and smell. Therefore, of course, because he makes a better tea taster and a more discriminating connoisseur of

Are You Going to Move?

The following is a little advice given to those who intend moving by a prominent physician:

"When moving into an apartment or house, whether it is a new building or otherwise, the first act should be to thoroughly disinfect it."

"All odors must be removed and every corner disinfected to destroy any disease germs which may have been left behind by previous occupants."

By adding a strong disinfectant to all cleaning water, such as C-N Disinfectant, all odors can be easily removed and much sickness prevented.
